CATTLE-FEEDING SURVEY RESULTS

Extensive Studies Have Been Made in Connection With Many Agricultural Colleges.

GOVERNMENT MAKES EXHIBIT

Amounts of Food Necessary to Make Same Amount of Total Gain on Feeder Steer Shown Pictorially—Systems of Feeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In an exhibit at the International Live-Stock exposition recently held at Chicago, the United States Department of Agriculture showed some of the results obtained from an extensive survey of steer feeding in the Middle West. These studies have been made in co-operation with agricultural colleges in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska. The survey has been carried out by the United States Department of Agriculture.

ried on for the last four years, and it has involved approximately 20,000 steers each year. Another year's study is to be made, but results have been obtained to date that are of practical interest to cattle feeders throughout the United States.

Results of Survey.

The results of this survey, thus far, were shown at the exposition in a booth entitled, "Beef Production," a part of the large government exhibit. It was found that two types of ration are being used by cattle feeders generally throughout this region. The type used in a locality is determined by the kind of hay that is grown there. About the same number of steers are fed by each method throughout the region studied.

Food Necessary.

The exhibit showed pictorially the amounts of feed necessary to make the same amount of total gain on a feeder steer, and the length of feeding period, under each system of feeding, as determined by this survey. Information on feeding problems and other phases of beef production may be secured by asking for bulletins from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

WHITEWASH THAT WILL HOLD

When Properly Prepared and Applied Material Will Cleanse, Disinfect, and Stay On.

Whitewash is often made in a slipshod way and is put on carelessly. It does not do the job well and will not last. When whitewash is properly made and carefully applied, it will cleanse, disinfect and stay on.

Slack ten pounds of quicklime in two gallons of water. Cover the container and allow the lime to slake for one hour. Add enough warm water to make the whitewash spread easily with a brush. To each five gallons add one pound of glue, (stick glue dissolved in warm water), one-fourth pound of salt and one pint of crude carbolic acid. Apply evenly, while warm, with a good whitewash brush.

MARKS ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Uniform System of Signs Now Extends From the Hudson River to the Golden Gate.

The marking of the Lincoln highway was finally completed in 1921 when, with the co-operation of the New Jersey highway department, the last permanent signs were placed along the 60-mile stretch between Jersey City and Trenton. The remainder of the marking in 1919 and 1920 has been well maintained with the result that a uniform system now extends from the Hudson river to the Golden Gate. The Lincoln highway is undoubtedly the best marked highway in America and this system installed at great expense is a wonderful aid to motorists.

MISTAKE IN WEANING PIGS

It Purchased Sometimes Advantage to Leave Animals With Sows Until Ten Weeks Old.

A very common mistake is to wean pigs at six weeks of age. This not only stunts the pig but it increases the percentage of mortality as well as the cost of gain.

Pigs should not be weaned before they are eight weeks old. If they are purchased it is sometimes advisable to leave them with the sow until ten weeks old, according to the animal husbandry specialist.

Weight of Feeder Pigs.

Feeder pigs usually weigh around 100 to 125 pounds per head when they are ready for finishing.

Method for Gardening.

Many gardeners should have a better method for gardening.

DOCKING LAMB WILL MAKE BETTER ANIMAL

Tails Are of No Benefit and May Do Some Harm.

Should Be Removed When Youngster Is About Two Weeks Old—Operation Requires Two Men and Knife or Docking Iron.

Lamb's tails are of no benefit and may even do harm; therefore they should be removed when the lamb is in its second week of life, say the five stock men at the New York state agricultural college at Ithaca. The operation requires two men and a sharp knife or docking iron. One man holds the lamb and the other locates a joint in the tail by feeling on the inside.

The loose skin is pushed back so that a flap will grow over the stub and the tail is cut off at a joint about one and a half inches from the body. The cut is made quickly with a sharp knife. A piece of cord tied tightly around the stump close to the body will stop excessive bleeding, but it must be removed in eight or ten hours so the stump will not slough off.

Even old sheep can be successfully docked with hot docking irons, the college says, and there is no danger from loss of blood. Sealing the tail off with irons heated to cherry red sterilizes the wound and prevents bleeding.

Reasons given by the college specialists for docking lambs are that in the first place the tail is of no benefit; if it is left on it accumulates around and beneath it; and females are likely to fail to breed. An additional reason for docking of the tail is that lambs look neater and deeper in the leg and twist if the tail is docked.

NOSE PRINTS IDENTIFY COW

Method Is Being Employed to Determine Animals Being Tested for Milk Records.

There are finger prints to identify criminals, footprints to identify newborn babies, and the latest use of the inkpad is to identify cows. It is a sure means of identifying "Tessie," the family cow, when she comes home late at night.

STANDARD FOR BEEF BREEDS

To Assist Beginner Department of Agriculture Issues Bulletin Giving Information.

The question of the beginner, "which is the best breed of beef cattle?" cannot be answered if he insists upon definite reasons, for no beef has been found superior to all others. A man may have a personal choice, his neighbors may be raising one particular breed, or his conditions may be more nearly ideal for one breed than any of the others.

In order to help those who are uncertain as to which breed is best adapted to their conditions, the United States Department of Agriculture has prepared a bulletin in which are given the characteristics of the beef and dual-purpose breeds in the United States, together with a brief history of their development. A comparative standard of excellence for beef breeds is included in the bulletin, a feature which makes it possible for the beginner to compare the breeds point by point.

A copy of the bulletin may be had free of charge by writing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and asking for Farmers' Bulletin 612.

POTATO GRADES GAIN FAVOR

Big Majority of Buyers Demand That Shippers Do Business on Basis of Federal Rules.

The federal potato grades are growing in popularity. "More than 75 per cent of the buyers of potatoes in car lots are demanding that shippers do business on the basis of the U. S. grades," it was stated by the Department of Agriculture following a survey of the trade.

Investigators found in Minnesota that out of 24 buyers in different parts of the country who were queried, 18 demanded the use of U. S. Grade No. 1. The Greater demand for the potato crop at 45,000,000 bushels. To move to keep a crop of a profit, department officials urge strict grading of potatoes according to the U. S. standards.

TRAGEDY OF WAR

Veterans Will Understand Pathetic Story of Paris.

"He Wasn't the Guna," He Declared, and His Story Rang True to Legion Correspondent.

I came upon him in one of those odd cafes which the tourist in Geneva rarely visits. He stepped in out of the fog that overhung Lac Lemna, haggard, dirty, with a face grown prematurely old. I noticed that he wore an O. D. woolen shirt and that his shoes were unmistakably American army issue.

As he came within the circle of the cafe lights he caught sight of me, and a frightened look passed across his face. He turned as though to go, when I greeted him after the manner of a tourist greeting a countryman and indicated a vacant chair at my table. He flinched, peered at me more closely, and finally slumped into the seat.

As he sat down his eyes fell on my American Legion button and he tensed to his feet with a cry. His face quivered with emotion. He gazed hopelessly at him, then sank back into his chair.

"You—were in the war?" he stammered.

"Yes—pilot roller," I answered reassuringly.

"France?" he questioned eagerly.

"Ten months," I replied.

Quickly he changed the conversation to America. We talked of prohibition, of the high cost of living, of the presidential campaign, of Camp Merritt, and other purely impersonal topics. I did ask him casually what his outfit was, but he did not answer.

Far into the evening we sat. He told me he worked as a porter in a little hotel in Louisiana. He earned 15 francs a week and his board and lodging in one corner of the hotel. When I questioned him about his hacking cough he admitted that the doctor thought it was tuberculosis.

Finally I rose to go, and we strolled together down the Quai de Mont Blanc. Once he caught hold of my arm and cried, "There's another American!" At the door of my hotel I turned to say good-night to him, and he shook my hand.

Then he wheeled suddenly around and whispered huskily into my ear:

"If you'd known you wouldn't eat with me," he explained, "I—I was sick—the captain at the dispensary wouldn't look at me—he was going to leave. My head whirled, but I packed my stuff somehow and started off for the front with my outfit."

"Then something snapped in the back part of my head. It wasn't the guns, I tell you!"

Here his voice broke into a scream. "I ain't yellow most times, but—well, I cut and ran. A lot of the fellows were killed that night and—I, well, I wish I'd been with 'em. I got down to Bordeaux. The M. P.'s down there took no notice of me. I slept in a haystack at night. I had just been paid. Then the armistice was signed and the fellows went home."

"You see, I enlisted with a bunch of fellows from our town. I couldn't go back. The whole town knows what I did. I made a clean breast of it in a letter to my brother—he's the married one—and he wrote me back an awful letter. Mother weeps black for me, but he told me that the neighbors were talking. He told me that I was finally reported missing in action. He said he hoped I'd always be—that it would break mother's heart if she knew the truth. She's all for coming over to France to hunt my grave, but my brother won't let her. He said I was a disgrace to the family and to the town. I know it now—but—well, I wish I was dead."

The long speech brought on a new fit of coughing. He reached out a hand to say good-by and I reached out mine, but he withdrew his own and cried: "No! No! You don't want to shake hands with the likes of me!"

Off into the dark hurried this man without a country, and long after he was lost to sight in the fog I could hear his racking cough—George F. Kearney in the American Legion Weekly.

May Be New Klondike.

Rich deposits of gold have been discovered on the St. Hubert river, Labrador, Newfoundland, which may develop into a new Klondike. A party of Canadians made a prospecting cruise on the Labrador and then filed application at the department of agriculture and mines for 22 square miles along the banks of the St. Hubert river, where, it is said, they have discovered gold in paying quantities in the sands of the stream. The river extends about 40 miles inland from the coast, and is in the area from which nugget samples of gold were brought some few years ago by natives of the coast. Exploration parties from St. John's later covered the area inland prospecting over solid surface, but not along the river. Their quest produced merely meager samples of quartz ore, but not in such quantities as to justify extensive exploration.

New Thermometer.

Electric pyrometry, as the measurement of temperature by electric means is called, has been so far perfected that it is applicable from near the absolute zero—about 273 degrees Fahrenheit below the ordinary zero—to the temperature of melting platinum, more than 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit above zero. There are two methods of measuring temperature by electrical means, one depending upon the increase of electric resistance of a pure metal with increase of temperature, and the other on the production of an electromotive force in a circuit of two metals when one junction is kept at a constant temperature and the other is heated to the temperature which it is desired to measure. Many electric pyrometers give a continuous record of the temperature on a revolving drum.

Wasn't an Easter Rabbit.

Four-year-old Marie of Francfort, Ind., had often been told stories of the Easter rabbits and had heard of egg hunting parties where children would hunt for nests of eggs, supposed to have been hidden by rabbits.

One day her father was telling her of his hunt. He told of looking through the fence into a bunch of tall grass and seeing a rabbit in its nest. He took a stick and poked it out.

Marie listened with wide-eyed attention, then said: "Did you break any of its eggs, daddy?"—Indianapolis Star.

DEVIL DANCE EXPELS SPIRITS ORDEAL FOR UGANDA BRIDE

Tibetans Have Simple Methods of Getting Rid of "Demons" That Disturb Their Happiness.

The Tibetan lama, living on the "roof of the world," has presumably discovered a magic for appeasing and expelling the demons who disturb his happiness and deny him pleasures. To the lama, the nomad and the merchant the high, barren Asiatic plateau is peopled with ghosts, goblins, gnomes, imps, demons and evil spirits.

The panacea for all troubles is a devil dance. The Tibetans' dance is as weird an incantation as one could find in any part of the world. The lamas wear hideous masks representing every known and unknown demon, ghost, spirit and goblin that frequents the high, barren plateau. These are carefully caricatured, deformed and authored up, and on the last day of the three-day festival, escorted by the lamas outside the south gate and safely blown to nowhere.

Matter of Finance.

Ossip Gabrilowitch once related a story about a well-known pianist's pupil who was said to have always chosen compositions in rapid style for her study numbers.

"Madam," said the artist one day in exasperation, "why do you not try an andante? It would develop your phrasing to much better advantage."

"Oh," said the protegee, "it's because your lessons are so expensive. I can't afford to play slow music."

The New Venice.

Any modernization of Venice would be a profanity, yet we cannot wonder that this city with its glorious maritime traditions longs to become a world port once more. How to accomplish this without marring the beauty of the remarkable aquatic city was a problem. This danger has been happily averted by a wise governmental policy. Trade is to be diverted away from the city itself to a great new harbor, and industrial centers now being built upon the mainland at Marghera and Mestre. These points are connected with the sea by a new ship canal dredged across the lagoons in continuation of the Giudecca canal.—Scientific American.
